Not good business
So the Adani company may receive a loan of $900 million of public money with no transparency regarding how it will be repaid.

So the Queensland government plans to forgo $320 million of royalties from this mining venture.

Am I missing something? I, like many baby boomers, have run a small business; have paid lots of tax; and would never lend a large amount of money to anyone without clarity for repayment. And I would not forgo huge royalties from my business interests.

I consider these government actions to be financial incompetence on a grand scale.
